PRINCETON, NJ — More than 200 New Jersey-based paratransit thought leaders are slated to attend EZ Ride's annual "Transportation Innovations to Build Healthier Communities Conference" in Princeton later this month. The conference focuses on special needs populations in public transportation. It takes place on Tuesday, Jan. 30, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the NJHA Conference Center at 760 Alexander Road. in Princeton.

This free conference will explore transportation opportunities, barriers and needs for the state's senior and disabled populations. Participants are representatives from townships, public-private agencies, transportation providers, for- and non-profit organizations that provide senior services and services to people with disabilities, county-level paratransit providers, and anyone else with a professional interest in providing transportation for seniors and those with disabilities.

"With seniors making up more than 15 percent and the disabled 6.7 percent of New Jersey's population, it is critical that we work together to find transportation solutions that are cost-effective for providers and users, and that maintain dignity for these populations who need and want to maintain their autonomy," EZ Ride Executive Director Krishna Murthy said. "We're all living longer, viable, accessible, public transportation options will bolster the quality of life and improve the health exponentially of those who rely on it."

Topics discussed at the conference will include:

- National Perspectives on Community Transportation;
- Coordinated Human Services Transportation Plan;
- The Power of Partnerships;
- Community Transportation Initiatives in New Jersey;
- Growing Older, Better: What's Mobility Got to Do with It?; and
